Marion Jones

Sponsored by: Chippewa Valley Orthopedics & Sports Medicine and Orgel Wealth Management

Marion Jones—the first woman ever to take home five medals in one Olympics—lied to federal agents in 2003 about her use of a performance-enhancing drug. In 2007, no longer able to live with the lies, she admitted the truth and was stripped of her medals. Marion was then sentenced to serve six months in the Carswell federal prison in Fort Worth, TX, a prison known for its violence and abuse. What kept her sane in confinement was her faith in God and the firm belief that she may be able to help someone else through her experience. Her book and her words are doing just that.
